Well, don't you believe it, fellow members of Local 209? don't you. In the audience was my good friend of three decades? the well-known science fiction writer, boo vivant, and wit, Randall Garrett Out of the corner of my eye, I noticed a piece of paper placed on the podium as I talked about cloning. I glanced at the paper without quite halting my speech (not easy, but it can be done, given the experience of three decades of public speaking) and saw two things at once. First, it was one of Randall's superlative pieces of satiric verse, occur outside, as well as inside, science fiction. "Doesn't matter," I say. Crawford and Lang hung around as the scientists looked things over. They were not anxious to get. "I haven't had an indecent proposition from you in days. So I thought I'd make one of my own." "We've had a change in plan up here," he said, with no preface. "I hope this doesn't come as a shock..? I hope so." The adults were standing separately around the space while tiny helicopters flew around them, wrapping them from head to toe in strips of webbing like human maypoles. "David and Murray?". In the pilot's cabin, Crawford was ready to believe her. Like all flying machines since the days of the windsock and open cockpit, this one was a mad confusion of dials, switches, and lights designed to awe anyone who knew nothing about it. He sat in the copilot's chair and listened to her. "Good morning," I said and showed him my ID. He blanched. His eyes became marbles brimming with terror. He was about to panic, tensing to slam the door. I smiled my friendly, disarming smile and went on as if I hadn't noticed. "I'm inquiring about a man named Andrew Detweiler." The terror trickled from his eyes, and I could see his thin chest throbbing.
